This truly exceptional five-bedroom, three-bathroom family house is located on a cherry-tree lined street between Holland Park and Kensington Gardens in London’s exclusive Kensington district.

Its interesting layout features a basement floor with a comfortable family room as well as an elegant reception room, a spacious kitchen with a central island, and a dining room. This level also has access to the back garden. The long central hallway on the entrance level leads to a front drawing room, an office, a bathroom, and boasts an original window in the floor that lets more light in the rooms below. All of the bedrooms are spread out over the three above-ground floors, one of them a master suite that takes up the entire first floor with an en suite bathroom and access to a terrace. On the topmost floor, there is a lovely playroom with plenty of closet space, shelves, and a sink.

The house has a clean white stucco façade, and features some preserved historical elements. The location is one of the finest in London, with members of the royal family as neighbors.

Interior: 277.68 sq. m. The property is being sold by Strutt & Parker.
